1. The Customer Charter

This Charter sets out what customers of our members can reasonably expect. The Customer Charter will be incorporated into the annual membership certificate that will be displayed in members' business premises (shops and offices) and also on their websites. This will signify that members of the National Association of Jewellers are signatories of the Association's full Code of Conduct and acknowledge their commitment to abide by and uphold this Code.

The National Association of Jewellers Member Customer Charter: a mark of our commitment to you

This Charter sets out what you can expect of us as a member of the National Association of Jewellers.

We will:

1. Act with honesty, integrity, and professionalism.
2. Describe jewellery, watches and other goods and services for sale fully and accurately.
3. Abstain from any conduct or practice that may mislead or deceive.
4. Act responsibly and sustainably to support the NAJ's commitment to the standards of the Responsible Jewellery Council.
5. Deal with any complaints in a timely and fair manner and, in the event of dispute, clearly explain the NAJ procedure for mediation, providing the NAJ Compliance Officer's contact details to facilitate a timely resolution.
6. Co-operate fully with any enquiry to resolve any disputes and abide by the findings and decision.

It is the Association's intention that the Charter would be altered as little as possible over time as it consists of broad principles, but that the accompanying specific guidance would be updated to reflect market changes and other developments as appropriate. Members are encouraged to review the guidance notes at least annually when they renew their membership.

The Association will always require your complaint in writing.

The National Association of Jewellers is a trade association and professional body for companies involved in the jewellery industry: manufacturers, suppliers, designers, valuers and retailers. We promote, watch over and advance the interests of such companies who as members are committed to our Customer Charter and Code of Conduct. In the event that all efforts by our member to resolve a complaint or dispute have been unsuccessful the Association will attempt to mediate a satisfactory outcome which may include: conciliation and adjudication by an external ADR provider, the Professional & Technical Standards Steering Group, and/or a panel appointed by the National Committee to consider the dispute on a completely impartial basis and where possible, recommend a way forward. The Association has no legal sanction; it is not a court of arbitration and has no powers to enforce a settlement. Thus, while the Association will use its best endeavours to mediate and resolve a dispute with the aim of achieving a reasonable outcome satisfactory to both parties, it cannot enforce one. It is expected that members will co-operate with the mediation process and outcome.

The service is strictly based on written correspondence only, and no verbal communication will be entered into once the service is in progress other than in exceptional circumstances. The Association does not deal with the matter of compensation.

When we first receive a complaint, we will check that it:

- Is about a subject and organisation that we can consider.
- Has gone through the right complaints process.
- Has arrived at our office within 12 months of when the issues in your complaint happened.
- Has enough detail and paperwork for us to get to work on it.

It's important to note we cannot deal with complaints that are:

- About issues that happened more than a year ago (unless there are special circumstances).
- About employment, personnel or most contractual matters.
- The subject of a court case or tribunal.
- Against non-member companies.

Complaining about a NAJ Member

If your dispute is with a member of the Association, you can access NAJ Resolve, the independent consumer complaints service for jewellery businesses in the UK and Ireland, operated in conjunction with the Centre for Effective Dispute Resolution.

We hope that it will rarely be needed for you to make a complaint against a member of the Association, however, if you need to do so, this section explains the process to be followed.

- Step 1: Contact the member

Problems between you, the consumer, and the company can arise because of misunderstandings or a breakdown in communication and can often be resolved by direct discussion with the person concerned. If a phone call to the company does not resolve the issue, please write to the NAJ member concerned setting out the problem. Keep a copy of your correspondence for future reference. You may also wish to ask for a face-to-face meeting. Make sure you find out who is the right person to speak to about complaints. Please note that your contract is between yourself and the person or business which issued the invoice/receipt and so you should approach them initially.

- Step 2: A complaint to the Association

If your own efforts to resolve a grievance directly with our member have failed, then the Association may be able to investigate the matter on your behalf and will use its best efforts to resolve things. You must submit your formal complaint to the Association in writing (letter or email) setting out the details of your complaint. The points which need to be covered are shown below.

Please note that 'hearsay' evidence is not acceptable and cannot be taken into consideration, nor will informal second opinions from any third party, whether a NAJ member or not. Make sure you have gone through Step 1 before sending anything to us.

When submitting your formal complaint, please include copies of all correspondence which have passed between yourself and the member concerned. Your correspondence will be made available to our member and their response made available to you, the consumer.

To submit a complaint via NAJ Resolve visit naj.co.uk/resolve.

- Step 3: Second Opinion

If appropriate, the Association will arrange for a second opinion/professional assessment from a suitably qualified individual. A charge may be made for this service, but we will not do this without your approval.

- Summary

The National Association of Jewellers does not have the authority to order a refund or part refund by the member, irrespective of the outcome of the complaint. Only a court of law has the authority to order any action or payment in connection with a complaint. Citizens Advice, Trading Standards or Consumer Direct can advise you as to your consumer rights with regard to refunds. However, a genuine effort will be made to deal with your problem and achieve a satisfactory solution. Please note that the NAJ complaints procedure may not be used as a precursor to litigation (that is, you can't use our process to take someone to court).

Most complaints can be resolved by candour and good communication between both parties.

- Communicate with the member. If this does not resolve the complaint, then:
- Put your complaint in writing to the business in question. If this does not resolve the issue, then:
- Put your complaint in writing to the Association enclosing copies of all relevant correspondence. A copy of your correspondence will be sent to the member concerned asking for their response, which will then be made available to you. All correspondence will be considered by the Investigating Officer, the BATF Principal Officer and, when appropriate, the Professional & Technical Standards Steering Group and appropriate action taken and/or recommendations made.

The Association cannot become involved in a dispute where the matter is being dealt with by the courts.

Failure to Resolve a Dispute Using Mediation

The parties may seek resolution in accordance with the laws of the United Kingdom at any time, however, to do so during the mediation process may cause the process to be suspended.
